From the President & CEO

Dear Member,

Happy New Year! This month, we'll debut new seasons of many of our most popular programs, and we'll make an exciting change to our programming schedule. On January 23rd, WTTW's flagship weeknight series Chicago Tonight will move to 10:00 pm weeknights and our primetime lineup will shift to an hour earlier beginning at 7:00 pm. We hope you'll spend your evenings with us, and make Chicago Tonight and WTTW News essential to your daily local news routine. With expanded investigative reporting, vivid human interest storytelling, and essential community-driven coverage, co-anchors Brandis Friedman and Paris Schutz will keep you informed with trusted, independent journalism.

For drama lovers, on Sunday evenings we bring you a triple-bill of Miss Scarlet and the Duke, All Creatures Great and Small, and Vienna Blood. Antiques Roadshow will return with new stops from around the country and Dr. Henry Louis Gates, Jr. continues his quest to "get into the DNA of American culture" in a new season of Finding Your Roots. On wttw.com, discover some of the real history behind Vienna Blood and its vintage Viennese setting, and try some delicious recipes from America's Test Kitchen's new season.

On WFMT this month, WFMT Presents will spotlight African American classical music leaders, including composer Adolphus Hailstork and Chicago Jazz Philharmonic co-founder Orbert Davis. On wfmt.com, as you attempt to stick to your New Year's resolutions, try a fun quiz that will tell you what you should strive for in the New Year – whether that's taking on a new instrument, or going outside of your live music comfort zone! Perhaps that could include our helpful rundown of 10 new Chicago-area ensembles to watch – and listen to – in the new year.

Once again, I wish you a happy and healthy 2023.

Sincerely,

Sandra Cordova Micek
President & CEO

Jay Smith

A Q&A with...

News Director and Chicago Tonight Executive Producer Jay Smith

As CHICAGO TONIGHT prepares to move to 10:00 pm weeknights beginning January 23, we sat down in WTTW's Crown Studio with news director Jay Smith to talk about the local news business and plans for Chicago Tonight and WTTW News.

Guide: There are some big changes planned for Chicago Tonight. Can you tell us what viewers can expect?

Smith: In the coming year, in addition to our time change, Chicago Tonight viewers and visitors to wttw.com/news will see us doing more investigative reporting, essential community-driven storytelling, and real-time solutions-oriented journalism. We will report stories you won't see anywhere else, stories that directly impact lives and move the dialogue forward on local issues of consequence and concern.

Guide: On January 23, you'll move to 10:00 pm. What drove this schedule change?

Smith: We know viewers in Chicago and the surrounding communities are looking for and are watching local television news at 10:00, and that there is an opportunity at that time to provide a high-quality news program that takes viewers deeper into the stories behind the headlines of the day.

Guide: You recently debuted a new studio set, theme music, and surrounding technology. How is the new environment enhancing your storytelling?

Smith: Our new space and the technology that supports it is flexible and dynamic, and paves the way for presenting complex stories in a digestible, engaging way. The surrounding monitors and visuals on the new set serve as a backdrop that can change depending on the story, the time of year, the number of interview guests, and what we want the viewer to take away. We've been in the redesigned studio for a few months, and we're already seeing the impact on the viewer experience as we evolve how we use the space.

Guide: Are there examples of the kind of investigative work that you've done of which you are especially proud, and that we can expect to see more of?

Smith: Chicago Tonight co-anchor Paris Schutz and reporter Nick Blumberg recently produced and presented a series of stories about the Republican gubernatorial primary that uncovered information about candidate Richard Irvin that we thought was important for voters to know about before the election. Nick also produced a story that looked into CTA overtime records and understaffing and their impact on passenger safety.

Guide: What does a typical day in the newsroom look like?

Smith: (laughs) There is no typical day. The editorial team, which includes our supervising producer Crystin Immel and Guide: What do you most hope viewers take away from watching Chicago Tonight?

Smith: I would like our audience to feel that they can't go to bed at night until they have read our daily newsletter, checked in on the stories we're producing

Chicago Tonight Co-Anchors Brandis Friedman and Paris Schutz talking with Jay Smith on the new set.

“I hope our audience comes away with an understanding that we are thinking about them in everything we do.”

our digital editor Dan Lambert along with some of our anchors and reporters, meets in the morning to discuss what's planned – and unplanned – for the day. From there, we are all in touch throughout the day to continue reporting, producing, and filing stories as news happens.

throughout the day on our website, and watched Chicago Tonight at 10 pm. I hope they come away with an understanding that we are thinking about them and their communities in everything we do.

Reginald Mobley

WFMT Presents: Music of the Baroque

Though the concert title "Reginald Mobley Sings" focused on the guest soloist, MOB's November program, conducted by Nicholas Kraemer, could have served as a survey of the splendors of Baroque music as well as an introduction to the MOB chorus and orchestra itself. Mobley's solo arias and contribution to the Purcell ode Welcome to all the Pleasures were generously complemented by an a cappella anthem, an English dance suite, and the high-spirited Brandenburg Concerto No. 4!

This week we will hear the Russian ballets and return to Paris for what now is considered a full-out riot when Ballets Russe choreographed movements to express the music they heard from Igor Stravinsky. New music, and new dance techniques in the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées with stage designs and costumes by Nicholas Roerich. While listening to this music, sit down with your computer and research Ballets Russe in Paris. Its cultural history created a complete renaissance, if not a revolution.
