ALSO INSIDE

On WTTW, the fascinating new six-part series Walking with Dinosaurs brings the stories of six iconic dinosaurs to life with state-of-the-art visual effects, giving viewers the rare chance to see these giants as they walked the earth millions of years ago.

From the President & CEO

Dear Member,

As summer returns to Chicago, so too does the Grant Park Music Festival – a tradition that brings world-class music to the heart of the city. This year marks a new chapter as Giancarlo Guerrero steps into his role as Artistic Director and Principal Conductor, bringing his enthusiasm and global perspective to the popular outdoor series. On page 4, read our interview with Guerrero to learn what he’s most looking forward to in the upcoming season which will be presented live on WFMT, his thoughts on Chicago, and how WFMT influenced him as a young musician.

This month, WFMT also brings you an eclectic roster of artists on Live from WFMT including Josefien Stoppelenburg and Stephen Alltop who share Baroque vocal music accompanied by harpsichord and theorbo; the duo of violinist Philippe Quint and pianist Christopher Guzman; pianist Craig Terry and friends; and in the season finale, a performance by pianist and musicologist Samantha Ege. And WFMT celebrates Pride Month with dedicated episodes of The Midnight Special, Listening to Singers, and Best of Studs Terkel, plus a performance of Benjamin Britten’s Canticle 1: My Beloved is Mine on this month’s Ryan Opera Center Recital Series.

WTTW celebrates Pride Month with a new American Masters film that explores the life and work of the iconic singer-songwriter Janis Ian, and the return of Chicago Stories documentaries on activist-cartoonist Danny Sotomayor and the local origins of house music. And for something different, WTTW will premiere Walking with Dinosaurs – a new six-part miniseries bringing the stories of six iconic dinosaurs to life with state-of-the-art visual effects. Don’t miss this rare chance to see the giants of our past as they walked the earth millions of years ago.

All of us at WFMT and WTTW are grateful for your continuing support.

Sincerely,

Sandra Cordova Micek
President & CEO

An Interview with Giancarlo Guerrero

Artistic Director and Principal Conductor of the Grant Park
Music Festival

by KEEGAN MORRIS

GIANCARLO GUERRERO'S joy – for his art, for his new role, for the city of Chicago – is irrepressible.

The six-time Grammy-winning conductor acknowledges that his road to the podium might not be typical. With a good-natured, sardonic smile, Guerrero explains, “I come from Costa Rica and Nicaragua. You know, those two meccas of classical music!?”

Guerrero’s passion for the art form can be traced back to his youth orchestra days...and WFMT. In Costa Rica, he and his fellow musicians would carefully calibrate a shortwave radio to hear the WFMT-distributed Chicago Symphony Orchestra broadcast series. “This can move you regardless of where you come from.”

In the years since those Costa Rican listening parties, Guerrero has spent time in the Chicago area as a graduate student at Northwestern University, and in recent years leading the Chicago Symphony and Grant Park Orchestras. In October 2024, the Grant Park Music Festival appointed him Artistic Director and Principal Conductor.

He takes the helm at the festival this summer. And from the podium of the striking Jay Pritzker Pavilion in Millennium Park, Guerrero wants to inspire audiences of all stripes in the same way that music moved him in his youth. In between rehearsals, Maestro Guerrero spoke to WFMT ahead of his first season at the reins of the festival.

Giancarlo Guerrero, Nashville Symphony Schermerhorn Symphony Center

Listen to the new season live on WFMT beginning Wednesday, June 11 at 6:30 pm on 98.7FM, the WFMT app, and wfmt.com.

WFMT: Tell us about the importance of Chicago and the Grant Park Music Festival.

GIANCARLO GUERRERO: Chicago is one of the great cultural centers in the country. Period. Not just in terms of classical music, but overall. The size of the city allows you to find anything that you want. In the third largest city in the country, the possibilities are truly endless.

The word unique is used a lot, but find me another festival like this one that is open, free to the public, and goes back 100 years! Even our rehearsals – you can go and watch conductors and soloists do what they do every day just because we happen to be in a public park.

Continuing to expand the reach of the Grant Park Music Festival, I have to say, is priority number one. We are nothing without our audiences; we are nothing without our supporters. A big part of every single one of my visits is going out into the community and reminding everyone that this very special event is taking place for ten weeks out of the summer. That they should check it out because it's there for the enjoyment and enrichment of the community.

One big part of my job, I believe, is challenging audiences as well. You cannot come to just hear the classics. That isn't going to work in a city as wide and diverse as Chicago. Summer by summer, the city is changing and evolving. And for us to stay the same would be a huge crime! So, we must get creative and provide unique experiences to support new voices and compositions.

WFMT: What are you most looking forward to in your first season leading this festival?

GUERRERO: I am most looking forward to connecting with the players. Last year I was here for just a week for a couple of programs: one with the orchestra alone and one with the chorus. They were really special, and immediately we felt there was a spark, and that led to my appointment as artistic director.

WFMT host Dave Schwan and Giancarlo Guerrero in Levin Studio

“Find me another festival like this one that is open, free to the public, and goes back 100 years!”

GIANCARLO GUERRERO

We're all looking forward to when we get to make music together in one of the most incredible venues in the country.

WFMT: Joshua Bell was recently announced for a one-night-only concert with the orchestra. What do you think his appearance brings to the season?

GUERRERO: The fact that we're going to be making music with one of the great violinists in the world is a joy. And Josh isn't the only one. If you look at the rest of the season, we have very recognizable names throughout. Now that I am artistic director, I get to find excuses to make music with these amazing colleagues. They inspire not only our orchestra, but our audiences.

I want to present as many musical languages as possible. And I'm not always the right person for it – there's repertoire that may not speak to me – and that's why we have guest conductors! It speaks highly of the festival that these incredible artists also want to be a part of it. I'm enormously proud to continue with that tradition.

WFMT: How does this festival bring communities together?

GUERRERO: When you attend a performance, anything can happen. Concerts are shared events, whether they take place in a concert hall or out on a lawn surrounded by thousands of people. Chicago is one of the largest cities in the world, and it comes with a lot of noise. You cannot recreate that anywhere. Nothing matches live performance – there's something in the moment that will never be recreated.

If you want to hear the music played the same way over and over again, listen to recordings! I love my recordings, but at a live performance, there is adventure. You don't know where it's going to go! You may know the piece, but you don't know how it's going to be played that night. And everybody's hearing it through their own experience.

WFMT: The live performances reach an even broader audience through the series of WFMT broadcasts from the Pritzker Pavilion. Talk about what this platform means to you as a musician, and why you have such a strong connection to WFMT and Chicago.

GUERRERO: In the early '80s in Costa Rica when we were listening to WFMT on shortwave radio, it had to be a clear night, no clouds, for us to be able to hear it. Now, it's not just that you look out at all these thousands of people listening on the lawn, but you know that beyond that, there are people – God knows where – maybe another group of youth orchestra kids, sitting around in Costa Rica or in the Amazon, and they're being inspired. Nowadays, these performances are available to anyone, literally. The fact that we can reach even more people through our broadcasts never escapes me. That is very special. ■

Janis Ian: Breaking Silence – American Masters

At just 15, Janis Ian shook the world with her hit "Society's Child," a song about an interracial relationship that not only launched her career but sparked controversy. She also had to cope with early success, homophobia, record industry misogyny, and a life-threatening illness, all while creating an indelible body of work.

Marin Alsop

Chicago Symphony Orchestra

This summer, Marin Alsop returns for her fifth season as Chief Conductor of the orchestra's summer residency at Ravinia Festival. A highlight of Alsop's tenure thus far has been the establishment of the annual Breaking Barriers Festival, which in its three seasons has celebrated women conductors, women composers, and women leaders in music and space. This season, Breaking Barriers will focus on women leaders in food and music. Revisit the all-American 2024 opening night program which included Aaron Copland's Appalachian Spring Suite, James P. Johnson's Charleston, Samuel Barber's Knoxville: Summer of 1915 with soprano Masabane Cecilia Rangwanasha, and George Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue with pianist Michelle Cann.

Folkstage

Bloomington, Indiana singer-songwriter Jason Wilber started playing guitar with John Prine at the age of 26. For two dozen years, Wilber accompanied Prine on stages from the Grand Ole Opry to Austin City Limits, as well as playing live on late night TV for Stephen Colbert, Seth Meyers, Conan O'Brien, and David Letterman. Wilber has also collaborated with such legends as Lucinda Williams, Emmylou Harris, Alison Krauss, Josh Ritter, Kacey Musgraves, and others. Of his time with Prine, Wilber says, "It was a special gift to stand beside John all those years and watch what happened between him and an audience. ... it was a pleasure and a joy to get to be a part of it for so long." Prine's spirit echoes through Jason Wilber's own writing, along with a love of science fiction inspired by another local legend, Ray Bradbury. He shares songs from his latest album Time Traveler and more live from the Levin Studio.

Giancarlo Guerrero

Grant Park Music Festival

Grant Park Music Festival's newly appointed Artistic Director and Principal Conductor Giancarlo Guerrero is acclaimed for his commitment to new repertoire – each of his six Grammys has been for recordings of music by contemporary American composers. In his radio broadcast debut and his first performance in this new role, Guerrero leads a program that characteristically juxtaposes beloved classics with American and contemporary works. Grant Park Orchestra concertmaster Jeremy Black is the featured soloist in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. The program also includes Adolphus Hailstork's An American Port of Call, and Leonard Bernstein's Symphonic Suite from On the Waterfront.

Gesualdo Six

Listening to Singers

Formed in 2014, The Gesualdo Six is an award-winning British vocal ensemble comprising some of the UK's finest consort singers and is praised for their imaginative programming and impeccable blend. Their debut recording was released in 2018 to wide critical acclaim, and their discography has already grown to nine albums on the Hyperion label, each regularly reaching the top of the classical charts. This summer, the sextet comes to the US to tour the extraordinary theatrical concert Secret Byrd, created and directed by Bill Barclay and produced by Concert Theatre Works. Secret Byrd has been described by The Guardian as "glorious," "chillingly authentic," "ominous, buoyant and uplifting." In advance of The Gesualdo Six's upcoming Chicago performances, meet the founder of the vocal consort: bass, composer, and conductor Owain Park.

Samantha Ege

Live from WFMT

The season finale of Live From WFMT features an exclusive performance by pianist and musicologist Dr. Samantha Ege, a leading scholar and interpreter of the music of Florence Price. Her latest book, South Side Impresarios, showcases Chicago composers such as Price and Margaret Bonds during a golden era in Chicago's classical music history. As a concert pianist, Dr. Ege's performances bring her research to life, sometimes entwining narration and conversation. Whether sharing the Black Renaissance repertoire of Price and Bonds, or displaying the postmodernism of Undine Smith Moore and Julia Perry, or championing the British concertos of Avril Coleridge-Taylor and Doreen Carwithen, or celebrating the contemporary works of Bongani Ndodana-Breen and Odaline de la Martinez, storytelling is at the heart of Dr. Ege's engaging performances.
