ALSO INSIDE

On WFMT, in honor of the 175th anniversary of the founding of Chicago's first synagogue, join us for a unique Shabbat Evening service featuring Cantor David Berger, the Hyde Park Jewish Choral Society, and the Rockefeller Chapel Choir.

From the President & CEO

Dear Member,

This month, WTTW shines a spotlight on food, and how it reflects our individuality and brings us together. In her new special, Lidia Celebrates America: Flavors that Define Us, chef, author, and Italian native Lidia Bastianich will traverse the country to visit first, second, and third generation immigrants who share their culinary traditions and inspirations. You'll find our interview with Lidia on page 4!

As Lidia says, “Tutti a tavola a mangiare,” or “everyone to the table to eat!” All year round, WTTW brings you cooking programs, stories about food and recipes on our website (wttw.com/food), and our Deep Dish enewsletter packed with ideas for foodies. This month on WTTW, we welcome a new series, The Dooky Chase Kitchen: Leah's Legacy, showcasing New Orleans landmark restaurant Treme and its late chef who was known as the “Queen of Creole Cuisine”; and French chef and author Jacques Pépin returns with Heart & Soul, a series that looks back at his 60 eventful years in the kitchen. Visit our website for details.

And in related news, WFMT will cover Chicago Opera Theater's presentation of The Cook Off, a lively opera with libretto by Mark Campbell and music by Shawn Okpebholo, who describes it as “food seasoned with humor, history, and a little bit of feel good!” Also this month on WFMT, we'll mark the 175th anniversary of the founding of Chicago's first synagogue with a unique Shabbat Evening service featuring Cantor David Berger, the Hyde Park Jewish Choral Society, and the Rockefeller Chapel Choir.

I hope you will join us throughout the month, and thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

Sandra Cordova Micek
President & CEO

Lidia Bastianich

Lidia Celebrates America: Flavors that Define Us

Lidia Bastianich

In Lidia Celebrates America: Flavors that Define Us, premiering on WTTW on Tuesday, May 30 at 8:00 pm and streaming on the PBS app, celebrity chef and host Lidia Bastianich visits, cooks, and dines with immigrants across America. We'll meet a Ukrainian mother and son in Hartsville, South Carolina; Punjabi farmers and truck drivers near Bakersfield, California; and the United States' first Nepali-Bhutanese elected official in a suburb of Columbus, Ohio. Bastianich is herself an immigrant who fled a part of Italy controlled by Communist Yugoslavia for a displaced persons camp before coming to America. In this new special, she shares her own story as well as those of other immigrants, as a way of expressing gratitude to the country that took her in.

Bastianich spoke to WTTW about the new special and how food connects us all.

"Food has always ... fostered a belief that there is hope in life. We eat, we grow, and we move on."

The Guide: Why did you want to focus on immigrants in Lidia Celebrates America?

Bastianich: I'm an immigrant, and there's such a plus-minus, negative-positive [discourse] about immigrants these days. America is a [country] of immigrants. I was given my great opportunity by Americans, and also by the Catholic Relief Services and Catholic Charities. In the beginning, we had nobody who could even speak the language. In school, my teacher would assign young Americans, young kids like me, to teach me how to speak English. When we first moved and the Catholic Charities found a little home for us, the neighborhood rallied and brought us food, chairs, plates and towels – everything.

That still exists out there, so I went looking for it. I wanted to connect with these different immigrants. The one thing that gets people talking to you and connecting is food. I always use food: we eat together, or they show me how to cook. The table and food are the great equalizers. We're all the same there.

The Guide: What purpose did food serve for you when you were an immigrant in a new home?

Bastianich: [My family] escaped Communist Yugoslavia and came back to Italy, and ended up in a refugee camp there. I was in line for food, a little ten-year-old with my little plate. Whether it was soup or polenta or pasta with a little bit of something, food has always made one feel comfortable and good and fostered a belief that there is hope in life. We eat, we grow, and we move on.

Then, when I came to the United States, I slowly realized that I loved food: I loved the nurturing part, I loved the sharing part – I guess because I experienced the lack of food and being afraid of not having enough of it. I had this passion for cooking because I did it with my grandma, even in the camp, and when I was at school they got me in the kitchen. So I was destined for the kitchen.

And then I realized that food is one of the great gifts of the Italian culture. I thought I should share with my American friends. I saw that people appreciated it and loved Italian food. I realized that they really want to get to know my food. It was my great communication. It's my way of thanking and sharing with America, which is my home. But you never forget the culture in which you were born.

The Guide: You also use food to connect with newer immigrants in this latest special.

Bastianich: Their food is so important to them. It's wonderful to see how immigrants, plus the Americans, get involved and how one of the first things that they do when they bring a family into a home is that they bring their food, to say, yes – you're in America, but America appreciates who you are and you can always practice your culture.

Lidia visits a restaurant in Washington, DC

The Guide: You meet a Nepali-Bhutanese immigrant who was inspired to run for office and is now on the city council of Reynoldsburg, Ohio. Why do you like that story?

Bastianich: Can you imagine that? He was so appreciative – tears came to his eyes. This is reality. This is America. Let us continue to be inclusive as Americans, but also make certain that immigrants understand that they have their responsibility in this family. It is their duty as an immigrant – as well as an American – to return something to this country, to give back in any way that they can. That's what America is based on.

The Guide: Why did you look to places in this country that people perhaps don't tend to think of as housing large numbers of immigrants?

Bastianich: The East and West Coasts might have more visibility, but there's all of Middle America where [immigrants] settle. Also, the diversity of the immigrants is important; there's no need to focus only on the southern border. America is made up of all kinds of immigrants. People come here for different reasons – there are wars and famine in this world, and that creates a lot of refugees.

The Guide: Why is it important for you to share immigrant stories?

Bastianich: I am living proof. I am an American, I love America – I appreciate very much the opportunity that was given to me and my family. And I want to share my gratitude with the American public and the immigrants. Food is trustworthy. It's positive. I am an example of what I'm talking about. I am a success story as an immigrant – it could be them, too!
