Dear Member,

This month, WTTW is excited to premiere a new series for Chicago trivia buffs and curious explorers alike. On March 26, join us for The Great Chicago Quiz Show hosted by WTTW’s Geoffrey Baer, who each Friday night will welcome local contestants whose knowledge of trivia about our city will be put to the test. And on premiere night and after, visit wttw.com/quiz where you can play along at home. Turn to page 4 for a behind-the-scenes interview with Geoffrey and producer Eddie Griffin.

We’ll also mark Women’s History Month with American Masters profiles of novelist Flannery O’Connor and choreographer Twyla Tharp; a POV documentary, And She Could Be Next, that explores a defiant movement of women of color transforming politics; and Not Done: Women Remaking America, tracing the last five years of women’s fight for equality. On wttw.com, other Women’s History Month subjects include Emily Taft Douglas, a pioneering female Illinois politician, actress, and wife of Senator Paul Douglas who served in the U.S. House of Representatives; the past and present of Chicago’s Women’s Park and Gardens, designed by a team of female architects and featuring a statue by Louise Bourgeois; and restaurateur Niquenya Collins and her newly launched Afro-Caribbean restaurant and catering business, Cocoa Chili.

On WFMT, A More Perfect Union: A Tribute to Ruth Bader Ginsburg is just one of our headline features for Women’s History Month. Also listen to a complete opera, The Wreckers, by the trailblazing British composer Dame Ethel Smyth; two profiles of soprano Leontyne Price; and Music and Conversation features with mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne and soprano Renée Fleming. On wfmt.com, watch live Chicago Cultural Center performances of music by female composers including Rebecca Clarke, Fanny Mendelssohn, Mel Bonis, and Henriette Renié; meet female pianists who have changed the instrument for good, from Teresa Carreño to Martha Argerich; and learn about women conductors Antonia Brico, Nadia Boulanger, Marin Alsop, and Mei-Ann Chen, who changed the face of classical music.

Have a wonderful month, and thank you for your support.

Sincerely,

Sandra Cordova Micek
President & CEO

Q: Why THE GREAT CHICAGO QUIZ SHOW?

Baer: I really love shows that inspire the audience to actively engage with us. And a quiz show is the ultimate! It’s about as interactive as we can get on TV. I really hope viewers at home will be shouting the answers at their TV screen, trying to beat the contestants to the punch. And there will also be quizzes on the website so everyone can be a contestant!

Q: How were the contestants chosen?

Baer: We put out an appeal on social media for people to send us 30-second video “auditions” offering their Chicago cred and explaining why they would be perfect for the show. The auditions were AMAZING! Some people created quite highly produced videos with graphics and photos. Others just talked, but their passion and their sense of fun was so compelling. We also brainstormed people we know personally whom we thought would be great contestants. And we sprinkled in some local celebs, including Second City veteran George Wendt, who played Norm on the sitcom Cheers, and famous Chicago rapper Lupe Fiasco.
Griffin: I hope I’m not crushing anyone’s dreams here, but we never intended to cast contestants who were obvious trivia experts. The heart of the show is not scoring points or following strict game shows rules – it’s the personal interaction between Geoffrey and the contestants. We wanted to find warm characters with big personalities, charm, and wit. The audience will tune in for the trivia and knowledge, but hopefully they stay because they’re enjoying the contestants.

Q: Any favorite or funny stories from filming?

Baer: The way we made this show is unlike anything I’ve done before. I host the show in front of a green screen in our studio and all the contestants appear from their own homes via Skype. A lot of the show involves my improvised (and hopefully entertaining) banter with the contestants, but of course as we all know from endless Zoom meetings that there is that annoying little delay. So it was a constant challenge not to step on the contestant’s next thought or kill a really funny punchline by cutting them off too soon. And what a bunch of characters they were! From a Chicago-born Hollywood producer who now hosts a podcast about sex, to a South side father who creates Chicago history videos on TikTok to educate his kids through their preferred platform. We learned that the well-known University of Chicago social scientist Eve Ewing has a side job writing comic books. The Marvel Comics character Ironheart. And a woman in Bridgeport rolled up her sleeve and showed us a tattoo of the CTA ‘L’ system map on her arm – she got married on a chartered ‘L’ train. We met a food writer who eats bugs, a professional clown who cheers up hospitalized kids, and a guy who drove one of the buses in the Chicago Cubs post-World Series parade.

Griffin: Some of the best moments in the studio were when the show went off script a little. Prior to filming George Wendt, I would never have imagined that he and Geoffrey would both end up doing the Lightning Round in an SNL “Super Fans” thick Chicago accent, but “dat’s where it went, my frendt.”

Q: How difficult are the questions? Do you have to be a trivia super nerd to get them right?

Griffin: You know, some of the questions are difficult, I have to admit. There were plenty of answers I didn’t know prior to production. But I think the mark of a good trivia game is making sure the players can at least get in the ballpark with their answers. There’s no fun in stumping your contestants, but you also don’t want to throw softballs. There’s a fine line in creating that balance. If any of our questions seemed to be on the tougher side, we gave Geoffrey creative license to drop some hints.

This interview has been edited for length.

For Women’s History Month

In addition to recordings by women artists and works composed by women, several special features will highlight female accomplishments in the arts and elsewhere. A More Perfect Union: A Tribute to Ruth Bader Ginsburg recognizes the late Supreme Court justice’s place in legal history and also her love for music. From our archives we offer two tributes to African-American soprano Leontyne Price: one was originally hosted by Kerry Frumkin to mark her 60th birthday, the other was produced more recently by Marilyn Horne and soprano Renée Fleming, a Live from WFMT devoted to Chicago’s Artemisia Vocal Trio, Dame Ethel Smyth’s opera The Wreckers, and a Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center presentation of Vignettes: Covered Wagon Woman written for and interpreted by mezzo-soprano Stephanie Blythe. Variable dates and times throughout the month

From the Metropolitan Opera
The production of Bizet’s Carmen from 2014 stars the Georgian mezzo-soprano Anita Rachvelishvili in the title role; she had made her Metropolitan Opera debut in the same role three years earlier. Critics of this production singled her out for praise, along with the Romanian-born soprano Anita Hartig as Micaela, and the conducting of Pablo Heras-Casado. About the production, they noted stark sets and a general ambience of violence, with no moves to glamorize the supposedly “colorful” lives of gypsies, smugglers, and toreadors. The cast also stars Aleksandr Antonenko as Don Jose and lidar Abdrazakov as Escamillo.

Announcing the 2022/23 Season

Music of the Baroque 2021
On February 28, Music of the Baroque performed a virtual concert program at Skokie’s North Shore Center led by violinists Kathleen Brauer and Kevin Case. Focusing on compositions written for pairs of soloists, the concert featured Bach’s popular Two-Violin Concerto in D Minor, composed around 1730 for the concerts of Leipzig’s Collegium Musicum; Vivaldi’s Two-Violin Concerto in A Minor; Handel’s Concerto grosso in E Minor, Opus 6/3; and Arcangelo Corelli’s Concerto grosso in F, Opus 6/2. Enjoy this recording of that concert, and stay tuned the same evening for more early music on Candice Agree’s Baroque&Before.

New from the Ravinia Festival
The Highland Park Strings, now in their 41st year, devote most of their seasons to free concerts underwritten by the Highland Park District, the Community Foundation, and the Negaeune Foundation. With five concerts off the table right now, the group performed for Ravinia and WFMT’s series of events from Bennett Gordon Hall. For this performance, they were joined for two Winter concerts (by Vivaldi and Piazzolla) by the Indian-American violinist Maya Anjali Buchanan, winner of the 2017 CSO Young Artist Competition. Also on the program are a string divertimento by Mozart and Elgar’s Serenade for Strings.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic in Concert
The Korean-born composer Unsuk Chin, who won the prestigious Gravemeyer Award in 2004 for her violin concerto, composed SPIRA on commission from the Los Angeles Philharmonic in 2019. She describes it as a concerto for orchestra. For this concert, it was contrasted with more traditional fare: Debussy’s La Mer, and Tchaikovsky’s Violin Concerto which featured as soloist the Moldovan-Austrian violinist Patricia Kopatchinskaja, a composer herself as well as a performer. Conducting this unusual program was Lithuania native Mirga Grazinyte-Tyla, a former Gustavo Dudamel Fellow.

In 2012 Sir Andrew Davis, music director at Lyric Opera of Chicago, conducted this performance of Mozart’s Don Giovanni at the Metropolitan Opera. His stellar cast was headed by Gerald Finley in the title role and Bryn Terfel as Leporello, the Don’s often-resentful servant. The Latvian soprano Marina Rebeka portrayed the wronged Donna Anna, and her devoted lover, Don Ottavio, was played by Ryan Opera Center alumnus Matthew Polenzani. In the role of the also-wronged Donna Elvira was Ellie Dehn, and Isabel Leonard portrays the bride, Zerlina, who successfully avoids him.
